

A Silent Poet

*Winner of UAR Records annual songwriting competition.
Published and released by JerJoy Music (BMI).
Vocals by Kathy Hohenbery; Words and music by Craig Ruvere
© 2000, C. Ruvere, JerJoy Music.*

We knew this day would come,
Though we never dreamed so soon.
Your plane leaves in an hour,
As the clock strikes half past noon.
I must gather my composure,
How I pray these tears subside.
I rely on your around me,
That it hurts to say goodbye.
Then within a flash, I'm taken back,
To the memories we once shared.
A silent poet standing there.

Refrain:

But those were days of poetry,
How I lived through every line.
And those were days of innocence,
When our lives seems so confined.
Yet I, still remain.

We knew this day would come,
I can't believe we'll be apart.
My mind may soon forget you,
But there's a wound within my heart.
I evaluate my senses,
I'd rejoice if you would stay.
For the thought of you around me,
Seems to brighten every day.
Then within a flash, I'm taken back,
To the memories we once shared.
A silent poet standing there.

Refrain:

But those were days of poetry,
How I lived through every line.
And those were days of innocence,
When our lives seems so confined.
I've composed a thousand miracles,
Dedicated to your name.
But my page reads clear and words run dry,
As I'm lost in this refrain.
And yet I, still remain.
A silent poet.